

Recall that the free use of copyrighted works is permitted "in a question on an entrance examination or other examination or in an official certification of knowledge or skills".

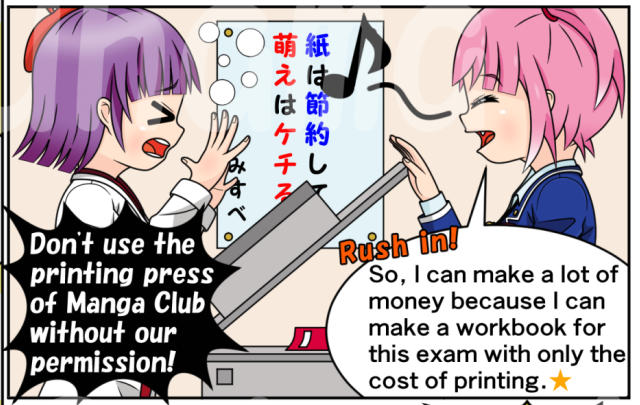

In other words, can't a copyrighted works be reproduced as a "workbook"?

Oh well!

She seems to be plotting something.

I've heard great things about copyrighted works being freely available as exam questions. ♥

Don't use the printing press of Manga Club without our permission!

Rush In!

So, I can make a lot of money because I can make a workbook for this exam with only the cost of printing. ★

Oops!?

Clank!

Wait a minute, Kurika-chan!

Your act falls under copyright infringement, so you'll be sentenced to imprisonment for up to 10 years.

Why is the act of reproducing as a workbook a copyright infringement?

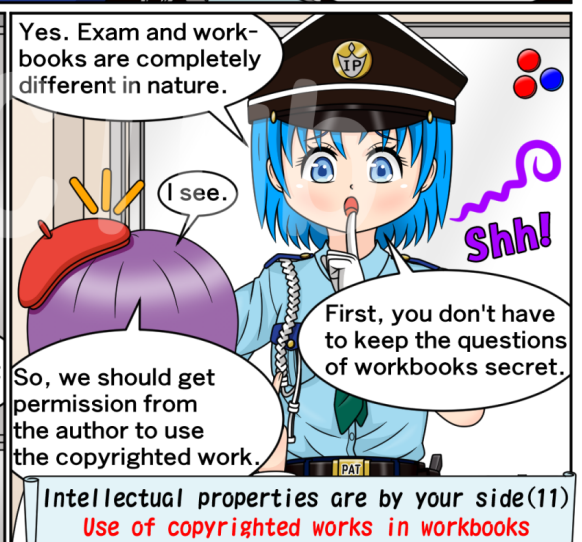

Then it makes sense to pay a fee to the author.

What a grasping fellow!!

Next, workbooks are produced to get money from users.

Look who's talking!

Yes. Exam and workbooks are completely different in nature.

I see.

Shh!

So, we should get permission from the author to use the copyrighted work.

First, you don't have to keep the questions of workbooks secret.
