

③A graphic image (ex. Smartphone operation screen)

②A building (ex. School building)

①An article (ex. Clothing)

Japanese Design Act protects designs related to these three areas.

I see. The costumes I designed are protected by the Design Act.

Christmas party for M...

Hey. I worked hard to make her costume.

I'll be playing the role of Santa Claus at our Christmas party.

If so, this costume should be firmly protected by Design Act.

~Day 32~
Mehr Licht.....

Light

Because to qualify as an article, it must be a tangible object.

I see. Clothing that is a tangible object falls under the category of design, while light, which is an intangible object, doesn't fall under the category of design.

I also designed the illumination for this Christmas tree.

Are these lights also protected by the Design Act?

I feel like this illumination design is similar to me.

Unfortunately, intangible objects don't fall under the category of design.

Flick!

Eek!

Hey! Don't draw my face without my permission!

The light emitted by her star is an intangible object and wouldn't fall under the category of design★

Btw, your costume is very cute, but it has a rather ordinary design.

Look!

I asked Misube to draw your face on my back♪